RACERS IN THE AIR DELIGHTS WONDERING AND HAPPY CROWD

German Balloon, in International Race, Passed Over
Rushville Today

SAILS IN UPPER CURRENTS

The Heart of the City Ceased to Throb When First Bag
Was Sighted

"There she comes!" "There she comes!" and all of Rushville was agog. The "she" mentioned in this instance was not a "her"—or rather a female—but a balloon, one of the contestants in the international race for the James Gordon Bennett cup.

As soon as "she" was sighted in the southwest there was a ringing and clanging of bells, whistles blew; old men cracked their heels together in delight; the small boy shouted and darted for a position in the open; dignified young ladies gathered their skirts about them and ran to get a good view; the business men locked their doors and turned out into the street; automobilists took to the country roads; factory employers suffered; a few nimble of limb and long on agility climbed to the court house tower; the roofs of the buildings were peopled as they were when Rome would have fete day; the wheels of commerce, locally, came to a stop, and the heart of the city's business interests ceased to throb—everyone was bent on seeing the balloon.

And the commotion was warranted. The scene witnessed today marked the first aerial navigation ever seen here. In years to come we will tell our children and our children's children (when they will have air ships for toys) of how excited and enthusiastic we became when we saw the first long distanced trip made in the clouds.

The balloon that passed over Rushville at nine o'clock, was the German balloon "Pommern," with a 77,000 cubic feet capacity and piloted by Oscar Erbsloeh, assisted by Professor Clayton. It was the first bag to be sent away at the starting point in St. Louis, and apparently has good lead on all other competitors. There were nine contestants, and they were started five minutes apart. All did not take the same course, as one was sighted sailing over Lake Michigan at 9 o'clock this morning.

"The balloon" are not equipped with propellers or other steering apparatus like airships, and the art of ballooning lies in reaching the right air currents to drift in a certain direction. This is done by means of handling ballasts and regulating their gas bags. Where they find a five mile westward breeze in the lower air strata, they would probably find a twenty mile current blowing the opposite direction in a higher altitude, and vice versa.

A number of persons throughout the county reported seeing balloons today, and it is thought that Rush county people had the pleasure of entertaining (in our sky parlors) about four of the nine contestants.

SEVEN DEATHS IN GIFFORD FAMILY

Angel of Death Again Visits Bereaved Family—Two Buried Together

Absolom Gifford died last night at his home in Bloomington at 11 o'clock. He was a brother of Mrs. Frelove Peters, of this city, and related to a number of residents around Fairview, where he was born and raised. His death marks the seventh one in the family since the first of the year; one brother and a sister were buried in the same grave. The burial will occur Thursday.

REPORTS FOR AUDITOR

Being Prepared by Banks in Compliance With Law

Rushville banks are preparing reports to be filed with the State auditor. The new law passed by the last legislature changed the date for ending the fiscal year from October 31st to September 30th and this has necessitated the early preparation of the reports. Special forms arranged so as to provide for publication in book form will be sent out for these reports. The auditor's call for reports this time will include all three classes of banks in the State—the State, private and savings bank—and all trust companies.

LOCAL WOMEN STUDY THE WORK

Rushville's Lady Bountifuls
Visit Large Indianapolis
Industrial School

SCHOOL HERE FLOURISHES

Other Women Will be Asked to Assist in a Most Worthwhile Work
Among Young Girls

Early last fall Mrs. T. W. Betker and Mrs. A. L. Stewart hit upon the happy thought of establishing an industrial school in this city, that they could teach children to spend their Saturday afternoons in a profitable occupation.

The two Lady Bountifuls secured the old Pearl street church, used as a barrack by the Salvation Army, and three each Saturday afternoon they labored, teaching the children how to sew. Many of them made their own dresses, and some of them sewed for the first time in their lives. It was a deal of pleasure for the children to wear dresses of their own creation, and the two women experienced much pleasure in seeing the benefit they were doing and in seeing the children at a work which they seem to thoroughly enjoy.

The school grew so large in numbers that the two ladies could hardly give it the attention they desired, and they contemplate asking other ladies to join them in conducting the industrial school.

Last Saturday Mrs. Betker and Mrs. Stewart were in Indianapolis and attended the Mrs. Blanford Industrial School. Over 700 children attend this school each Saturday and hundreds of the former pupils are now earning from ten to thirteen dollars weekly. The Rushville ladies had quite a long and profitable talk with Mrs. Blanford in which they noted points in the matter of handling a large number of pupils.

ARE ANXIOUS FOR RAINS

Farmers Find Ground Too Hard to Plow for Winter Wheat

Farmers of the county are anxious for rains. The ground is too dry and hard to permit plowing for winter wheat and the rain is needed badly. It is likely that more winter wheat will be sown in Rush county this fall than for many years.

Bill Geiger, who was arrested by City Marshall Price, Sunday, was tried before Mayor Cowing today on a charge of intoxication and was fined one dollar and costs, amounting to eleven dollars in all.

TALK OF FORMING A BRAND NEW COUNTY

From Parts of Franklin and
Ripley—Rigid Law Enforcement Distasteful

The news comes from Osgood, Ripley county, that a petition may be presented to the next legislature for the formation of a new county from two Ripley county and two Franklin county townships with Batesville as the county seat.

Versailles, the county seat of Ripley, is far to the south, and Brookville is not easily accessible on account of the hilly roads. This is the reason urged for asking a change, but it is asserted that the real reason is that the present spirit of law enforcement at Oldenburg and Batesville has aroused a strong opposing sentiment and those so holding feel that they could have things more to their liking if left to themselves.

TRUST COMPANY FOR RUSHVILLE

Wealthy Residents Will Organize Institution to Pay Interest on Deposit

PEOPLE NOW GO AWAY

Large Number Bank Their Money
in Connersville and Indianapolis Trust Companies

If present plans materialize Rushville will soon have a trust company. A number of prominent men, among them two of the wealthiest in Rush county are behind the movement towards organizing the trust company.

For some time, local men interested in financial matters have noticed that not a few of our citizens journey to Connersville and other cities each week to make time deposits, where they draw about three per cent. interest. They have noted that trust companies throughout the country flourish and prosper, and this, together with the fact that some Rushville people bank their monies with trust companies elsewhere, prompted them to take the initiative toward effecting an organization.

The Connersville trust companies carry advertising matter in the newspapers of all surrounding cities where there are no trust companies.

PERILOUS RIDE OF THE I. & C. CREW

Motorman Gray Clung to Hand
Hold With Death Like
Grip

In the Connersville Examiner an extended write-up is given of the I. & C. accident Sunday. Following tells of the perilous position and narrow escape of the men in the car:

"Crawford and Gray had started toward the rear of the car and the former had reached the steps on the north side. He was standing on the steps as though to jump when the car left the rails. He clung with a mighty grip to his hold and when the car came to a standstill in the canal he was on the top side. Had the car turned the other way he would have been under it. He escaped injury, however, and only suffered the inconvenience of getting a little water and mud on his clothes.

"Gray was equally as fortunate. He was inside the car and while he was forced to immediately secure a change of clothing, he escaped without so much as a scratch."

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR P. O. S. OF A. MEETING

Committees Appointed to Prepare for Celebration of Anniversary of Order

The local Patriotic Order Sons of America met last night and appointed their different committees for arranging a program and making other preparations for the celebration of the twelfth anniversary of their order, which will be held next month.

Each State officer will receive an invitation and is expected to be present. Special invitations will be sent to the other lodges of the State, and the W. R. C. and G. A. R. of this city will be the guests of honor.

Refreshments will be served, and a musical program will be rendered and several good speakers will be secured for the occasion.

STOCK KILLED BY PARIS GREEN

Riley Rhodes Who Worked in Rushville Livery Stables, is Arrested

CONFESSED HIS CRIME

Claimed That He is Not Responsible—Says He Fired Barns
at Knightstown

Riley Rhodes, once headed for the penitentiary for firing residences and business blocks in Knightstown, is again in the toils. Rhodes is a well known character about Rushville having worked in the various livery stables here for about two years.

Outraged citizens will see to it that he does not escape this time on an insanity dodge as he did four years ago when a tool of the saloon element in Wayne township. This time he was arrested on the charge of poisoning a pony, horse and cow, property of his employer, Robert Heaton, of Knightstown. After his arrest Saturday night he broke down completely in the jail and confessed to Deputy Sheriff Burr to having placed paris green in the pasture for the purpose of killing the stock. After confessing to that outrage he confessed to having fired the two barns which were burned a week ago. An investigation showed that Rhodes, who was employed by both Bob and Waite Heaton to feed their stock, had taken a large amount of paris green from the can in which it was kept. He was reprimanded a few days ago by his employer and had been very surly ever since. No attempt has been made to secure his release.

ARE THROWN OUT

Souvenir Tinsel Cards Cannot go Through the Mails

Many Rushville people have mailed souvenir postal cards to friends, but they will never be delivered. Why? Because the cards are illuminated with diamond dust and tinsel which makes them very hard to handle. On this account the postal department has issued instructions to send all such mail to the dead letter department at Washington. Within the last few days fifty such cards have been gathered up by the mail carriers and all will be sent to Washington. The postal department believes that the other mail is far too important to handle cards which retard the railway mail and postoffice clerks. If you care to mail such cards to friends place them in an envelope and add the required amount of postage and address on the outside.

BOCKOVER WAS AFFECTING THE ROLE OF DESERTED HUSBAND

THE AUTO BUSINESS

Demand for Machines Next Year
Will be Heavy

The automobile manufacturers of the country are now figuring on next year's output of machines. According to figures given out at the office of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' association the total American production will be about 55,000 machines, of which the association members will build 37,000. Placing the average selling price of these 55,000 automobiles at $2533, the manufacturers will receive $139,135,000.

PREACHED TO A BIG AUDIENCE

Dr. Abberley Talked on "Precious Invitation of Christ"
Monday Evening

INTEREST IS GROWING

Tonight the Pastor Will Discuss the Question, "Why Did Christ Die?"

At the services at the Main Street Christian church Monday evening a very large crowd was present, considering it being Monday night. The large auditorium was well filled.

The large chorus under the leadership of Prof. Charlton, rendered some excellent music. Prof. Charlton also sang a beautiful solo, entitled, "Come Unto Me."

The pastor, Dr. R. W. Abberley, preached an impressive sermon on "Christ's Precious Invitation," which was greatly appreciated by the entire audience, the message, which the pastor declared, is filled with the very essence of the spirit of the Master, and the one which reveals the true purpose of the Life of Jesus in calling men and women to Him.

Dr. Abberley disputed the claim of some, who say that the sinner can do nothing towards his soul's salvation, but wait until God in his good time, wants to save him. "According to this doctrine," said the pastor, "if there are two men in this audience and one accepts the gospel and the other does not, the responsibility is placed on God to work a miracle into one's heart and let the other one go, which is not true."

"If a man is lost," said the pastor, "it is the man's will and not the will of God. The invitation is 'Whosoever will, may come,' and if we reject the invitation it is our own fault."

The minister said that some songs were filled with the spirit which taught that God was a respecter of persons, one of which is "Pass me not, Oh Gentle Savior," and he requested that that song would not be sung during the revival.

Tonight Dr. Abberley will discuss the great question, "Why Did Christ Die?" A question box will be used each evening and the pastor will attempt to answer any question concerning religion, which may be placed in the box properly signed by the questioner.

PRUITT WILL PITCH LAST GAME ON NEXT SUNDAY

Charley Pruitt will probably pitch for Connersville against New Castle next Sunday. This will be the last game of the season.

Wife's Return Puts a Different Aspect on the Clarksburg Affair

HUSBAND HAD AN AFFINITY

The Same Hailing From Laurel,
Where She Has Been Duly
Returned

Mrs. Walter Bockover, of Clarksburg, and formerly of New Salem, who was reported to have deserted her husband and seven children about a week ago, for no apparent cause, has returned. She went to Greensburg and immediately telephoned to her husband at Clarksburg to come after her, which he refused to do. She then started to walk home, arriving there about supper time. Bockover had locked the doors and refused to admit his wife. Mrs. Bockover was found standing in the alley by some of the neighbors crying and begging her husband to let her in to her children who had seen their mother through the window and were crying for her. When taken to the home of a neighbor, Mrs. Bockover related a story which put an entirely different aspect on the whole affair. Up to the time of Mrs. Bockover's return the sympathy of the whole community seemed to be with the man who was playing the role of the deserted husband in an effective manner.

According to Mrs. Bockover's story her husband had been too friendly with a girl who was employed in their home and was deliberately planning to get rid of his wife. Bockover had claimed that his wife's people at Sharptown had written her a letter telling her to come home and leave her husband and children. This she denied, saying that her husband had asked her to leave as he was in debt and could not keep her and the children through another winter. He hired a livery rig and borrowed the money to pay her way home. He then tried to get the children in the Odd Fellows Home; finding the process too long he then tried to get them in the Orphans' Home. Mrs. Senior refused to accept the children until their admittance had been gained through due process of the law. The application was to have been made Monday, had not the mother returned. Al Schum and John Morgan, representing the Clarksburg lodge of Odd Fellows, of which Bockover is a member, ordered him to admit his wife to the children, and the girl who had been staying there was sent to her home near Laurel.

Mrs. Bockover brought the money to pay Bockover's debts and also clothing for the children from the home of her parents near Kokomo. For the sake of the children it is hoped that all difficulties are now cleared away and that the husband and wife will realize the duty they owe to their children.

COSTS WILL EAT UP A VALUABLE FARM

Lawyers Will Win in Long Drawn
Out Legal Battle Over
Farmland

The Nancy Worth-Evans case is still grinding away in the jury room, says the Connersville Examiner. This is the suit in which the title to 160 acres of Rush county land, valued at $16,000, is involved. The case has now been on trial more than a week and the costs incurred will amount to a considerable sum. The opinion has been ventured that by the time the costs and counsel are paid that there will not be much left of the farm. The case will require two or three more days.

A PRETTY SIGHT

St. Louis Enjoys Unique Spectacle In Start of Big Balloon Race.

ALL MADE A GOOD START

Conditions For the International Race Could Hardly Have Been Better and Thousands Enjoy Scene.

Four Nations Are Watching With Interest the Outcome of Great Contest.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Drifting along in a direction just west of north when lost to view in the haze of falling night and with a freshening southeast breeze behind them, nine big balloons started out last evening competing for the honors attached to the winning of the second international aeronautica cup race. A brilliant moon was shining throughout the middle West and conditions seemed ideal for a record-breaking flight.

A stiffer wind would have been more welcome to the occupants of the wicker cars, which hung like tiny specks beneath the great globular gas-filled bags, but the five-mile breeze of the lower air strata gave promise of splendid racing currents in the higher altitudes. The Germans, acting on this theory, reached for these courses right from the start. The French and English aeronauts were more conservative and selected a middle depth, while the Americans raced away at an altitude which seemed to take them just clear of trees and housetops.

So low in fact did two of the American teams balance their cars that there was grave danger of the baskets raking a crowded grandstand, and intense excitement prevailed. The St. Louis, one of the largest balloons in the race, came so close to the stand that it was seized by a squad of soldiers, swept back to a safer starting point, and sent away two minutes after the official word to go was given. In the big race there are three balloons representing America, three representing Germany, two for France and one for England. The basket of each balloon contains two occupants, the pilot and his aid.

With a prospect of the breeze holding to the southeast and south, many predictions were made that the final landing place of the winning balloon would be in Minnesota or one of the Dakotas. Others held to the opinion that the upper currents would send the crafts further to the east, to find a place of descent east of Lake Michigan.

The record of the race, established last year by Lieutenant Lahm of the United States in a flight from Paris to Flying Dales, in the north of England, is 402 miles, but each aeronaut in the present contest confidently expected to exceed that distance. The start was spectacular in the extreme and was witnessed by a throng gathered in Forest Park, variously estimated from 60,000 to 150,000 persons. All St. Louis gazed skyward during the late afternoon, but a heavy pall of smoke obscured the view from the greater distances. The action of the Germans in taking the higher altitudes assisted materially in the start, the splendid spectacle that it was. Floating away along three levels, as many as six of the balloons were visible at one time, the American contestants being the first to disappear in the haze along the horizon. The German balloon Pommern, a bright chrome yellow globe, No. 1 in the race, was the first away, the start being made just 35 seconds after the scheduled hour of 4 o'clock. The other contestants followed at intervals of five minutes. As each was sent away the great crowd broke into cheers, and until they were well out of view the occupants of the baskets were kept bowing and waving their hats in acknowledgment of the demonstrations of good wishes and good luck.

The American teams came in for the greatest of applause, and when the St. Louis, entered by the Aero Club of St. Louis, took flight, the shouts and cheers were louder than all that had gone before. A military band stationed in the grandstand played the national anthem of the nation represented as the various foreign balloons ascended. For the American teams there were "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "Yankee Doodle"; for the English, "God Save the King"; for the French, the "Marseillaise," and for the Germans, "Die Wacht Am Rhein."

The St. Louis, the last of the contestants to get under way, was greeted by "Yankee Doodle" at first, and then, amid renewed cheering, the band struck up "I Don't Know Where I'm Going, but I'm on My Way." There was another incident with the St. Louis. Just before the big bag was dragged into starting position, a dove alighted on the very pinnacle and remained there until the balloon was well under way. This was regarded as a good omen by the local enthusiasts.

Farmers Will Adjourn Today. Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 22.—After a discussion of many questions of vital importance to agriculturists in general, the 17th annual session of the farmers' national congress will come to an end today.

FISH GAINS POINT

The Harriman People Finally Come to Opponent's Terms.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Stuyvesant Fish has obtained a postponement of the Illinois Central stockholders' meeting until Dec. 18. The Harriman people agreed to the adjournment, although they had previously been anxious to push matters as rapidly as possible.

The decision to adjourn the meeting was the result of a conference between William Nelson Cromwell for Mr. Harriman, and Judge E. H. Farrar for Mr. Fish. The overtures came from Mr. Cromwell, who sought out the Fish people, and declared that he wished to come to some sort of agreement. He was informed by Judge Farrar that the only agreement that could be reached was to accept the terms of Mr. Fish, which would be the adjournment until Dec. 18, and a decision of court, if the Harriman people so desired, to determine the right to vote the 286,731 shares of stock against which a temporary injunction was issued by Judge Ball one week ago on the application of Mr. Fish.

After an extended conference Mr. Cromwell assented. The proxy committee late last night had worked down to the letter "T." The proxies under the letter "W" had previously been considered, leaving only five letters still to be passed upon.

Although none of those directly interested would give specific figures, it was understood that the total number of votes represented was not far from 460,000. Of this amount, Mr. Fish, according to excellent authority, controlled about 250,000 and Mr. Harriman 210,000. There were not sufficient votes in the remaining letters upon which the committee still had to pass, to overcome this lead of Mr. Fish, and it was evident that Mr. Harriman was beaten unless he could bring into the contest some portion of the 286,731 shares against which Judge Ball issued the injunction.

THE FIRST BATTLE

Between Rival Sultans Resulted in Mulai's Favor.

Tangier, Oct. 22.—The first conflict between the forces of the rival sultans Abd El Aziz and Mulai Hafid, took place Oct. 17, near Settatt, between Shawta and Mequinez, according to reliable reports just received here from Mazagat, with the result that a detachment of troops fighting with Mulai Hafid, the sultan of the south and consisting of eight regiments under Mulai Rachid and known as the first division, defeated the forces of Abd El Aziz, the sultan of the north, and captured Caid Bushta Bagdani, the commander-in-chief of all Abd El Aziz's forces in the field, who had with him eight pieces of modern field artillery. The favorable effect of this victory to the cause of Mulai Hafid is incalculable.

Coroner Gives Figures.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 22.—Coroner Leavitt has made public the official death list, numbering twenty-five, of the Fontanet disaster. A mass meeting of the citizens of Fontanet was held and resolutions were passed to the effect that if the powder mills were not rebuilt they would permit the DuPont company to restore their homes and replace their furniture as it was before the explosion. But if the mills are to be rebuilt by the company the citizens declare they want a cash bonus for their property in order that they may remove to a place of safety.

Mitchell's Condition Satisfactory.

Lasalle, Ill., Oct. 22.—John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, who underwent an operation for appendicitis here a week ago, is gaining in strength, and, according to a statement by his physician, his condition is entirely satisfactory. It will probably be several weeks before he will be able to leave the hospital.

Killed by Big Four Railway Train.

Shelbyville, Ind., Oct. 22.—Isaac Hurst, sixty years old, a carpenter, was instantly killed here. He was crossing the Big Four railway tracks and was caught by a freight train, his head being severed from his body.

Ellis Pleaded Guilty.

Goshen, Ind., Oct. 22.—George W. Ellis, for eighteen years superintendent of the Elkhart county schools, pleaded guilty to grand larceny on a grand jury indictment, it being charged that he stole $1,500 of county funds through presenting dummy supply bills to the county auditor and collecting the money. He was sentenced to the penitentiary at Michigan City from one to fourteen years, fined $1,500 and disfranchised for five years. Ellis was at once taken to prison.

Looking Into Affairs.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—The federal grand jury has commenced an investigation of the affairs of the Chicago National bank, which failed about two years ago and whose president, John R. Walsh, is now under indictment for alleged misapplication of funds. The investigation involves the actions of two subordinates of Mr. Walsh whose actions are also said to have been in conflict with the banking laws.

John E. Mauden to Race in France.

It is said John E. Mauden will race a string of over twenty head of horses in France. He has four eligibles in the Grand Prix. The owner of the winner of that $50,000 race is the transcendent personage of the hour in France.

MADE A CLEANING

New York Clearing House Throws Overboard the Jonahs.

MARKET RIGHTED ITSELF

Like a Ship Which Has Passed Through a Squall Wall Street Settled Into Course.

The Resort to the Strong Hand to Root Out Objectionable Elements Proved Effective.

New York, Oct. 22.—The diligent labors of the clearing house authorities during the closed period of business activities over Sunday bore fruit Monday in a prompt and decisive accession of confidence. The stock market righted itself like a ship over which a squall has passed, and prices all through the list started upward and in some instances retrieved many points of last week's declines. The field of the troubles in the ranks of New York banks was generally understood last week, but the force of the depression which this exerted was caused by the fears that the troubles must run to a culmination and threaten the involvement of the general banking situation. A conviction was lacking of the power of the clearing house to right the difficulty. The measures adopted over Sunday showed so clearly the resort to the strong hand to root out the conditions which were causing apprehension that much of the fears were dissolved. The trouble was recognized to be one principally of personal methods, and with the elimination of the persons objected to, the objectionable methods were believed to be effectively done away with. The authoritative pronouncement of the clearing house committee that the banks under criticism had been solvent after examination and that assistance would be rendered them to meet their deposits removed the principal fears of immediate consequences. Solid satisfaction was felt over the policy followed by the clearing house in its wider scope as well. The lack of conservative banking methods and the rapid extension of banking control by the new element which has been curbed has been a subject of disquiet for a long time past.

By a process equivalent to what stock operators call "pyramiding" and by use of one bank's stock as collateral for securing control of another, a rate of extension was threatened which would involve wide consequences in time of financial stress. The United Copper episode last week involving clumsy attempts at market manipulation and employment of banking resources in futile speculative maneuvers proved a danger signal. The necessity of appeal for assistance to the clearing house which grew out of the distrust aroused by that discreditable episode, threw power into the hands of the clearing house to dictate terms. The outcome is regarded with satisfaction.

William Sherer, manager of the clearing house, stated that the situation was under control, that some of the more awkward features had been eliminated, and that from this time there would begin a new era in New York banking. Mr. Sherer said also that the clearing house committee would carry out the policy of assisting the weaker banks to discharge their obligations. The committee, it was added, would meet every morning to pass upon the collateral offered in settling debit balances. The new officers of the Mercantile bank and Bank of North America are engaged in clearing up many old accounts and obligations contracted by the preceding administrations and in inducing borrowers to take up their loans so as to provide the banks with sufficient cash to meet their more pressing requirements.

On the stock exchange the improved banking conditions resulted in a rally of pronounced proportions, the more active issues advancing 2 and 3 points with greater gains in some of the specialties.

The Wallings Released.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.—William English Walling of Indianapolis, his wife and his wife's sister, Rose Strunsky, who were arrested and taken to jail Sunday night because of their association with members of the Finnish Progressive party, were released last evening. The police found nothing among the papers of the trio to warrant detaining them. No conditions are attached to the release, but Mr. and Mrs. Walling and Miss Strunsky intend to leave St. Petersburg on Wednesday.

Change of Venue in Walker Case.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 22.—A civil suit entitled the State of Indiana ex rel. County Auditor Harry Stinson against John P. Walker, former county treasurer, and an alleged embezzler of county funds amounting to $63,500, has been transferred to Gibson county on a change of venue. The suit is to collect Walker's alleged shortage. The Federal Union Surety company and Walker's other bondsmen are parties to the complaint.

TRUST GOODS SEIZED

Uncle Sam Takes an Advanced Step in Trust Busting.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The federal government has taken another sensational and advanced step in its warfare against trusts. It has seized trust goods passing in interstate traffic.

Acting under orders from the attorney general, a $7,000 shipment of leaf tobacco consigned from Durham, N. C., to the British-American Tobacco company of Great Britain, was attached at Norfolk, Va. The action has been taken by invoking Section 6 of the Sherman anti-trust law, which authorized the seizure and condemnation by the government of property of any trust while in interstate or foreign commerce.

This is the first time the section has ever been enforced, but it is understood that similar action may be taken against the products of other trusts.

The government charges that one-third of the company's $30,000,000 capital is held by the Imperial Tobacco company and the balance by the American Tobacco company.

The government further charges that the British-American company has been created as an instrumentality and for the special purpose of defeating and violating the laws of the United States, and while its principal office is in London, the chairman of the board of managers is an officer of the American Tobacco company, against which suit for the dissolution is already pending.

PRESIDENT AT NASHVILLE

Program Included an Address at Jackson's Tomb.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 22.—Immediately after closing his speech at Vicksburg yesterday afternoon, President Roosevelt and party were rapidly driven to the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railway station, where a special train stood in waiting. At the depot an enthusiastic Mississippian yelled: "Good-by, Teddy; you can get anything Mississippi has got," and it seemed to please the president greatly. No prolonged stop was made at Memphis, as the train was immediately transferred to the Louisville & Nashville railway and the trip to Nashville began. Upon arrival here this morning the president was escorted to the Ryman Auditorium, where he made a short address. From there he proceeded to The Hermitage, twelve miles from the city. At The Hermitage he delivered an address at the tomb of Andrew Jackson. At noon he left for Chattanooga. The city was elaborately decorated for the reception of the president.

MORE LAND FRAUDS

Are Charged in Case Brought Against an Arizona Road.

Santa Fe, N. M., Oct. 22.—Indictments have been returned by the federal grand jury against the firm of Phelps Dodge & Co., of New York, owners of the El Paso & Southwestern railway, as well as smelters in Arizona and coal lands in New Mexico. Further indictments were returned against Charles S. Spiess, one of the company's attorneys; Professor Douglass, former territorial engineer; David M. White, and sixteen others. The charge is conspiracy to defraud the United States in connection with coal land entries in San Juan county, New Mexico.

ALEXANDRIAN LIBRARY.

The Greatest Literary Treasure That the World Has Lost.

Perhaps the largest and most valuable of literary treasures the world has lost was the Alexandrian library. This collection, the most remarkable of the ancient world, is said to have contained in its most flourishing period 400,000 or, according to others, 700,000 manuscripts. Its royal founder collected from all nations their choicest compositions. We are told that one of his successors went so far as to refuse to supply the Athenians with wheat until they had given him the original manuscripts of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides. When Julius Caesar laid siege to the city the greater portion of this library was destroyed by fire. It was later replaced by the collection presented to Queen Cleopatra by Mark Antony. But it was not destined to endure long. When the Emperor Theodosius the Great in 391 A. D. ordered the destruction of all heathen temples within the Roman empire, the Christians, led by the Archbishop Theophilus, did not spare that of Jupiter, in which were kept the literary treasures. From this general destruction about 4,000 manuscripts escaped, only to be burned in 640 by Saracens under the Caliph Omar.—Argonaut.

A Pretty Fast Clock.

He was standing in front of the circular elevator indicator in one of the office buildings, watch in hand. It was the morning after, and I suppose that he had forgotten to concern himself with the frivolous detail of winding his timepiece the previous evening. His equilibrium was far from stable, and his eyes, unsteadily following the indicator hand, blinked with efforts at comprehension as he tried to set his watch.

"Dileuous clock (hic)—very 'musing (hic)—very fast pace we live (hic) these days (hic)—pretty fast fer my ole timer (hic)—dileuous—can't seem t' catch it (hic)—whoa!—there you are—gone again (hic). Pshaw!—dileuous clock."

I left him still trying to get his watch into conformity with the speeding indicator.—Boston Traveler.

How a Flea Jumps.

It is said that a flea leaps 200 times its height, and while it usually does land on its feet, it often falls, especially when it falls on a perfectly smooth surface, where the claws can get only a slight hold. A flea has six legs, whose great length and bulk make them so heavy that they must be a great help in keeping their own right side up when it makes one of those gigantic jumps, and when it lands upside down or in some other way its ability to kick is so great that not more than one wriggle is needed to set things right. A flea's wings are mere scales and of no use. But small and worthless as they are, they tell the entomologist something about the proper classification of the insect. To the flea itself they have no value.—St. Nicholas.

Polishing Small Articles.

It is said that a high polish may be obtained after nickel plating on small steel articles, such as screws, by tumbling them with leather and dry rouge. The articles are placed in a tumbling barrel with leather scraps. Some dry rouge is put into the barrel along with the screws and leather and the whole tumbled for some time. The rouge coats the surface of the leather and causes it to act like a polishing wheel. Canvas scraps may be used in place of leather.

Politeness.

Lady (to Irish gardener, who "obliges" by the day)—Well, Dan, and what do I owe you for today? Dan—Sure, ma'am, I'd sooner be taking the half crown you'd be offering me than the 2 shillings I'd be asking of you.—Punch.

You're trusting to when you buy property after the titles, etc., have been searched by us. It's a well known fact that experiments generally result very unsatisfactorily. There's no need of experimenting and our advice to you is to never buy property unless you have a clear title to it. This kind of work is our specialty, and you will find our services reasonable.

ART OF PIPE SMOKING.

How It May Be Made a Source of Great Pleasure.

As important as the condition of the tobacco smoked is the state of the pipe itself. A straight pipe, with a wide bore to the stem, is the best, says the London Globe, because it is easy to clean with a few twists of a feather. No doubt feathers are the finest pipe cleaners.

Next, no doubt, to a good seasoned tobacco the great secret of enjoyable pipe smoking is to have a battery of pipes, so that a frequent change is possible. The ideal plan is never to smoke a particular pipe more than once a day. When done with it should be cleaned and stood in the rack, bowl downward, and all pipes should be used in rotation.

There is a great art, too, in filling a pipe. If the tobacco is crammed in haphazard it will not burn evenly, and a tightly packed pipe is the cause of more tongue blisters than even an ill conditioned, half drowned tobacco. Pipe filling is perhaps the most difficult thing a smoker has to deal with. Old hands cannot be sure of always exactly hitting the right degree of even density throughout the bowl, and beginners invariably make a botch of it.

Some people will never master the thing in a lifetime, try as they may, and they are perforce limited to the minor delights of cigar and cigarette smoking or at least have to put up with mixtures which by reason of their short, choppy nature are fairly fool proof from this point of view.

A perfectly filled pipe should light at once in an evenly glowing disk and should burn through almost to the bottom uninterruptedly, preserving a slightly coned shape the whole time. A curious, not to say unaccountable, thing about pipe smoking is the way in which the formation of the cake—the hard black substance which collects on the inside of the bowl—varies with different smokers.

It does not appear to depend on the nature of the tobacco used, but almost entirely on some mysterious attribute of the user. With some smokers this cake grows rapidly and must be constantly pared away, while with others its collection is just as slow. In either case the interior of the bowl must be kept as smooth as possible by frequent scrapings. This insures the rim fire necessary for the cone shaped burning. A rough bowl means center fire and waste of tobacco.

To many people the first smoke from a new pipe is always a terror, but the breaking in of a new brier should never be attempted by smoking in the ordinary way. It must be done by some sort of bellows arrangement. A bicycle pump is not a bad thing. The pipe should first be packed hard with the strongest and juiciest tobacco obtainable. It is then lighted and drawn up to a glow with the mouth. A few puffs will suffice for this, when it is laid on the table and blown at steadily until the charge is all consumed. A pipe treated in this way is ready at once to go in the rack and take its turn with the rest.

DOCTOR THE ITCH WHERE THE ITCH IS

Don't Dose the Stomach to Cure Eczema and Other Skin Diseases

Those afflicted with Eczema, psoriasis, salt rheum, or other skin diseases of a similar nature, should never dose the stomach to rid themselves of the terrible itch. They should doctor the itch where the itch is—cure the skin through the stomach.

Eczema and other diseases of a kindred kind are skin diseases—not blood diseases. Science has shown that Eczema is caused by germs in the skin and that the disease can be eradicated only by killing the germs.

Dr. Decatur D. Dennis was one of the first physicians to follow out the germ theory in skin diseases. Then he discovered that by mixing oil of wintergreen with other soothing agents he had a liquid prescription which killed the germs and cured the awful itch, leaving the skin white and smooth. Since that time this D. D. D. Preparation has been the standard remedy for skin diseases, just as D. D. D. soap is the standard high grade skin soap.

The first few drops of D. D. D. give instant relief from the terrible itch and from the frightful burning of the diseased skin. So reliable is this D. D. D. remedy that hundreds of physicians prescribe it. It is a wash as thin as water and as mild and as pure, which is applied to the diseased portion of the skin.

Mrs. Frances Richmond of Milton, Trimble county, Kentucky, writes:

"My little girl's fingers were sore almost to the bone from Eczema. I used part of the sample bottle of D. D. D. Preparation received from you and now they are well. It is a wonderful skin remedy."

We carefully investigated this D. D. D. Prescription before recommending it to our neighbors and patrons, and after a long experience we are more than ever convinced of its wonderful merits.

THOMAS W. LYTLE, Rushville, Ind. You needn't decide now, but call at our store anyway and we will show you how this D. D. D. Prescription gives instant relief from itch.

BATTLE PENDING

Society of Equity Enters National Convention With Swords Drawn.

FIGHT ON THE PRESIDENT

Principal Point at Issue Is Whether Everett Shall Remain at Head or Be Ousted Entirely.

Growing Factional Differences Will Culminate in the Meeting This Week.

Indianapolis, Oct. 22.—Delegates to the national convention of the American Society of Equity, which convened in Tomlinson hall this morning, came prepared for war. The society has a bitter internal battle on which this week's meeting is expected to end.

The principal point at issue, it is understood, is whether or not President J. A. Everitt shall continue to be president, or whether he shall be ousted from the society entirely. It is said there will be charges of graft and misconduct of office made on the floor of the convention, and every session promises excitement. Two dozen states, from New York to Oklahoma, are represented in the delegations.

Mayor Bookwalter opened the convention with an address of welcome and Governor Hanly will speak to the members during the week. Practically all of the remainder of the proceedings will have to do with the war, it is declared. The other officers of the organization and the entire directorate are said by Everitt's opponents to be lined up against him, but he declares he has sufficient support in the directorate to take care of himself.

His support, Charles E. Speer, director of organization, says, is not among the directors at all, but in friends of his own, appointed by him to sit and vote with the directors as officers of the society. This procedure was first used by him last Friday night at a meeting of the officers and directors, it is charged, when the opponents of the president withdrew from the meeting.

Involved deeply in the controversy is the agricultural paper published by Everitt. It is charged that he has used the society for the benefit of this paper and the benefit of his seed business and that he has not advanced the real interests of the members in any manner. The society, capable of much good, it is said, has become merely an advertising scheme in the hands of the present president.

There is now pending in the superior court a suit by Everitt to obtain possession of the list of members in the society, which likewise constitutes the mailing list of his paper, it is said. The suit is not being pushed, because, so Everitt says, he expects the convention to sustain his right to the lists.

BRUNAUGH STILL MISSING

No Arrest Yet Made in Big Asphalt Scandal Case.

Indianapolis, Oct. 22.—Harry P. Brunaugh, who is under indictment for complicity in the asphalt repair frauds in this city, has not yet been arrested. The general belief is that he will not return unless he is forced to. Common talk around town is that the grand jury is almost certain to return other indictments than the one against Brunaugh. The name of three or four other persons are mentioned as among those likely to be faced with the charge that is now standing against Brunaugh.

A group of men in a hotel lobby were discussing Brunaugh's disappearance. One man said if Brunaugh had no more money than the $1,200 which he drew from the bank on Saturday, he could not get very far nor stay very long.

"I don't know," said another man. "It looks to me like Brunaugh has the best job with the surest pay that he has ever had. Whenever he gets broke all he will need to do will be to send word that he is coming home. That will bring more money."

Henry W. Marshall, president of the Western Construction company, was ordered to bring with him to the grand jury room all the books and papers of the Western Construction company that related to the street repair contract with the city of Indianapolis, and everything that would tend to show what the profits of the company on the contract have been. The grand jury evidently wished to know why the company did not discover that it was making an unusually large profit on the work, and whether or not anyone connected with the company had or could have had any knowledge or suspicion of graft.

When Marshall went to the grand jury room he took with him an armload of books and papers.

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, OCTOBER 22, 1907.

It is said that the apportionment of delegates to the State convention for the various counties will be made upon a basis of one delegate to every 200 votes cast for Fred Sims at the last election. It is estimated according to this, the next State convention will have about 1649 delegates instead of 1840. Necessary to a choice, 735.

"The canneries are forbidden to use in their products: saccharine, dulcin, sucrol, guarantose, hayden sugar crystals, glucin or any coal tar sweets, as well as sulfurous acid or any of its salts as a bleach or preservative." So says a dispatch from Indianapolis as to recent ruling of the State board of health. There is scarcely a day that does not mark at least a step in the right direction toward a more healthful condition among the people who use the products of the various establishments for turning out food of one kind or another.

George W. Self, of Corydon, the present Reporter of the Supreme Court, announces himself as candidate for renomination at the next Republican State convention. Inasmuch as it has been customary to elect reporters of the Supreme Court for a second term since 1860, Mr. Self thinks he should come under this old established rule, and for this reason asks to be renominated. Mr. Self has very ably filled the office to which he was elected, and has made great improvement in the quality of the material in the volumes of the reports and vastly improved the method of reporting, which has been complimented by both judges and lawyers. No doubt the Republicans of the State will honor Mr. Self with a renomination.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER.

Indianapolis, Ind., October 22.—John H. Edwards of Mitchell, prospective candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, came to Indianapolis today to get a better view of the political situation than is afforded him at home. He was very candid in saying that that was the purpose of his visit. Mr. Edwards said that he was not ready to make a formal announcement of his candidacy, although he gave out the impression that it would come within a short time. One thing that is believed to be holding him back is the uncertainty of the political plans of James Wade Emison of Vincennes. Emison was mentioned quite persistently for a time by Second district newspapers and politicians as a gubernatorial possibility, but after he gave them to understand that he would not enter in that race, some of them urged him to go after the lieutenant governorship. It is said that he is still debating this latter proposition. Edwards will make sure that Emison is not to be a seeker after the lieutenant governorship before he enters. He said that he had not discussed the matter with Emison and consequently was not in position to make any predictions as to what the Vincennes man would do.

Unless he changes his mind, Carroll K. McCullough of Anderson will become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor. He is informing his intimate friends of his intentions. He is a candidate right now, although he doesn't care to admit it publicly. His plan is to "lay low" for the next five or six months and permit the "other fellows" to do all the running. Then he believes that an opening for him will be created and that he can step in and win. He prefers to be a dark horse in the race right down to the finish. Like his brother-in-law, ex-Governor W. T. Durbin, he desires to be known as the business man's candidate. In fact, it is said that he is anxious to get as far away as possible from party lines so that he can go before the people without any entangling alliances. He is said to be

THE EXILE OF ERIN.

THERE came to the beach a poor exile of Erin;
The dew on his thin robe was heavy and chill.
For his country he sighed, when at twilight repaire
To wander alone by the wind beaten hill;
But the day star attracted his eye's sad devotion.
For it rose o'er his own native isle of the ocean.

Where once, in the fire of his youthful emotion,
He sang the bold anthem of Erin go bragh!
Sad is my fate, said the heartbroken stranger;
The wild deer and wolf to a covert can flee;
But I have no refuge from famine and danger;
A home and a country remain not to me.
Never again, in the green sunny bowers
Where my forefathers lived, shall I spend the sweet hours
Or cover my harp with the wild woven flowers.
And strike to the numbers of Erin go bragh!

Erin, my country, though sad and forsaken,
In dreams I revisit thy sea beaten shore;
But, alas! In a far foreign land I awaken
And sigh for the friends who can meet me no more!
Oh, cruel fate! Wilt thou never replace me
In a mansion of peace, where no perils can chase me?
Never again shall my brothers embrace me;
They died to defend me or live to deplore.

Where is my cabin door, fast by the wild-wood?
Sisters and sire, did ye weep for its fall?
Where is the mother that looked on my childhood?
And where is the bosom friend dearer than all?
Oh, my sad heart, long abandoned by
Why did it dote on a fast fading treasure?
Tears, like the rain drop, may fall without measure,
But rapture and beauty they cannot recall.

Yet, all its sad recollections suppressing,
One dying wish my lone bosom can draw;
Erin, an exile bequeaths thee his blessing!
Land of my forefathers! Erin go bragh!
Buried and cold, when my heart stills her motion,
Green be thy fields, sweetest isle of the ocean!
And thy harp striking bards sing aloud with devotion—
Erin mavourneen—Erin go bragh!

How He Won His Spurs and His Wife.

[Original.]

Years ago, when Indian fighting was in vogue, a party of army people, Major Hildreth, his wife and daughter; Captain Kelley, his wife and two children; Captain Nye and Lieutenant Chipman, started to transfer from one post to another.

There was no transportation available, except an army wagon drawn by mules. Improvised seats were put in, besides plenty of provisions, and another wagon containing arms, ammunition and some quartermaster stores that were awaiting transportation was also got in readiness. The commandant proposed to send a small escort, but the officers, who were young, agreed that the four of them, besides two drivers, a cook and a wagon full of fighting material, should suffice. No guard would have been thought of had not an Indian outbreak been considered imminent.

During the trip Nye was obliged to witness the constant devotion of Chipman to Marcia Hildreth, which was exasperating since Nye had long worshiped her in secret. But when the party had half finished the journey something occurred that fixed the attention of all on a common danger. Coming to an eminence on one of the foothills, a party of 200 Indians was seen below, and from their appearance and actions it was evident that the expected outbreak had occurred. They caught sight of the wagon and raised a warwhoop.

Major Hildreth, the ranking officer, possibly because he saw certain death staring his wife and daughter in the face, collapsed. Nye cast his eye over the ground, looking for a place to make some show of defense. Below was a wooded valley. Suddenly a light came to the soldier's eye, the light of genius for war. He began to give orders as if he were commanding his own troops. He took the wagons down into the valley. Of his six men he posted two on one flank, two on the other, while with the other two he proposed to hold the center. Each flank was protected by a rocky facade, while the center, through which ran a creek, was comparatively narrow. The wagons, with their contents, and the women and children were stationed behind a rock in the rear. Nye briefly explained his plan of defense. Marcia Hildreth insisted on taking a rifle at the front, but Nye told her that she could be of more service as his aid-de-camp, transmitting orders, information and ammunition.

Nye judged that the Indians, having seen the wagons, would consider them part of a train. Army trains are always furnished with a guard, as the Redskins well knew. As to the strength of this guard they were ignorant. His plan was to make them think by scattering his force that it was considerable. They advanced cautiously against his center, looking out for an ambush, and received a quick scattered fire from three rifles. Several of the advancing party fell. Then they drew off to make a detour to the right, but there they received another

One Way to Combat the Divorce Evil.

By GRACE GEORGE, Actress.

If husband and wife can't get along together the only thing for them to do is to get along separated. They should get a divorce, ESPECIALLY IF THERE ARE CHILDREN.

What could be worse for children? They are brought up in an UNSYMPATHETIC atmosphere that is bound to affect them and perhaps influence their lives. How much better it would be for them to be taken out of that atmosphere to be spared the conflict inevitable in A HOME THAT IS EVERYTHING BUT A HOME! And why should a man and a woman continue an existence that is distasteful to both of them? It seems folly to me. Why waste one's life?

But I was thinking only of a HOPELESS case. It is often possible, I believe, to remedy domestic ills if one will only go to a little pains in looking about and finding a way.

BY INTERESTING THEMSELVES IN EACH OTHER, A MAN AND HIS WIFE MAY MAKE THE DISCOVERY THAT THEY ARE REALLY VERY CHARMING AFTER ALL AND THAT IT IS THE EASIEST THING IN THE WORLD FOR THEM TO ENJOY THEMSELVES TOGETHER. IT IS LOSS OF MUTUAL INTEREST, I IMAGINE, THAT USUALLY LEADS TO MORE SERIOUS DIFFERENCES.

Indifference is the one thing of all others that a woman cannot endure. She likes a little attention, and if she doesn't get it from her husband SHE IS QUITE APT TO LOOK FOR IT ELSEWHERE. It is a very good idea, too, for a husband to take his wife out to dinner or something now and then. It helps to keep them lovers. And there should be a frank understanding between them.

Meanwhile the hopes of the party of standing off their enemies for at least some time grew stronger. The excellence of Nye's plan had become apparent. The party had ample ammunition and provisions, and the mountain stream afforded water. What they dreaded was either a rush of all the Indians together or that they would make a wide detour, get in the whites' rear and discover their weakness. As some counteraction for this latter danger Marcia Hildreth volunteered to go far on the right and make a masked defence. She took her mother with her, and Mrs. Kelley and her fourteen-year-old son went to the left.

Nye felt a ghost of a hope in this move, for he was sure that the Indians would try for his rear. He was right. A small party of bucks went around to the right. They were discovered by Marcia Hildreth, and two rifle shots rang out from her position. The Indians, convinced that their enemies were sufficiently strong to protect every weak point, now sat down for a regular siege.

For three days Nye held his little army, consisting of a few men, women and children, together, or, rather, separate, and wherever a redskin tried his foe he felt sure that he had met a sufficiently strong force. At the end of the third day the Indians, supposedly impatient of the delay and knowing that other conquests which they considered easier awaited them, trotted away.

The whites did not know how many Indians were killed. Of their own number Chipman was mortally wounded and one of the drivers killed outright. These were the only casualties. The fame of Nye's exploit reached Washington. He was advanced rapidly and soon given an independent command, in which he kept all the reputation he had gained, besides adding to it materially.

Marcia Hildreth was devoted to her wounded lover during the rest of the journey and nursed him till his death. It is possible that the bullet that killed him avoided complications or possibly prevented his betrothed from marrying the wrong man. It is certainly a dangerous thing for a woman engaged to a man to see another surpass him by a display of such sterling qualities, such fitness for command as was displayed by Nye, besides saving her life and the lives of all the party. At any rate, the funeral volley had scarcely been fired over Chipman's grave before there was a singular warmth in her treatment of Nye, and barely a year elapsed before she became the latter's wife.

CURRENT COMMENT

Will England Drop Japan?

Perhaps the most immediate effect of the Anglo-Russian agreement recently signed at St. Petersburg will be to incline the British imperial government to heed the demands of the colonies for Japanese exclusion. If the alliance with Japan is now a dead letter Great Britain will be free to permit her colonies to shut out the Japanese. England was confronted with an embarrassing and possibly dangerous situation when her colonies insisted upon excluding her own allies. Sooner or later the imperial government would have been forced to affront an ally or risk the disaffection of powerful colonies. If it is now possible to placate the colonies the British government will do it. If Japan's army and navy are no longer necessary to British security in India the pressure from the colonies is likely to be stronger than the moral obligation to observe a profitless compact with Japan. The first evidence of the strength of the new agreement with Russia, therefore, will probably be shown by a stiffening in the British policy toward Japanese exclusion in Canada, Australia and Africa.

Great Britain has never in her long history gone out of her way to help another power, whether an ally or not, unless there was profit in the move for her. If Japan cannot help her she is not likely to help Japan. The treaty of alliance may survive, but it may not be in force and effect. British influence is supposed to have inspired the dispatches from London which lay stress upon the assumption that if the United States and Japan should clash Great Britain would not feel herself bound to assist her ally as against the United States.

That Japan recognizes the changed position of affairs is indicated by the marked change in her attitude toward the rest of the world. There is a conspicuous moderation of the tone of communications from the government at Tokyo. The sudden hush in the warlike talk that followed the intimation that the United States was about to transfer its battle fleet to the Pacific is, to say the least, significant, especially as it was synchronous with the announcement of the conclusion of the long and difficult diplomatic negotiations that preceded the agreement between Japan's allies and the Russian government. Perhaps the British outbreak against Japanese labor in British Columbia and the awkward situation created for Japan thereby had something to do with it, but the greater probability is that the Anglo-Russian alliance was the moderating influence.

Management of Boys.

"Consistency is a jewel," but there is a lack of consistency in much of the advice handed out in certain quarters to boys and to the parents of boys. Lads are told to look at the hard lines of Lincoln, Webster, Greeley and other worthies of the past who got to be something from next to nothing. Fathers are told to give their boys amusement and money to pay for it and are also told to let the boys earn their own money and thereby get a sense of its value. Educators are told to spare the rod and trust to the boy's sense of honor to behave himself. Parents are told to send their boys away from home as soon as possible and let strangers put them through their paces. All the rules cannot be applied to all cases, and it is just as well or the future would be in the hands of machine made men.

Doubtless many a boy feels like saying, "Put me back in pioneer days and I'll do as the boys did then." It is inconsistent to ask a boy to be anything but what he is. He'll find ideals to follow in so far as his particular environment allows him to. Self reliance will always stand him in good stead, and the sooner he is taught to rely upon himself instead of his father's importance the better. Technical skill and education will not benefit their possessor unless he can apply them unaided. As a rule a boy who is trusted will strive to be worthy of trust. Anything can be made out of such a boy by giving him a square deal.

A PROGRESS CELEBRATION

Event is Planned to Celebrate Laying of Sidewalks and Establishment of Bank

On November 7th, the enterprising citizens of Glenwood will give a Fall Horse Show and a Grand Corn and Grain exhibit in their little town.

Strange as it may seem the event is being held to celebrate the laying of over two miles of new cement sidewalk and the establishing of the new bank there.

Fifty premiums will be offered in the different classes, and an effort will be made to make it the biggest thing ever held in Glenwood.

The convenience of travel offered by the traction company, and the town being situated between this city and Connersville insures a large crowd to be in attendance.

Both Congressman Watson and Hon. Francis T. Roots have been asked to deliver speeches.

PUPILS MAY WIN EXEMPTS

If Exam's and Department Reaches Standard Set by Officials

EXPLANATION TO PARENTS

Sent Out by Superintendent School to Every Patron of City Schools

Prof. J. H. Scholl, superintendent of the city schools has issued the following report which every parent should read:

"Reports cards were sent Monday to the parents and guardians of every pupil in the city schools. A few words of explanation of the plan of grading may be of interest at this time. No regular examinations are held in the first three years of schools. In the fourth and fifth grades tests and examinations are given, but not necessarily at any stated time. Beginning with the sixth year and continuing through the high school, pupils are permitted to win exemptions in any subject, a pupil must maintain an average of 90 per cent or above in each recitation, including written tests given at the option of the teacher at any time during the six weeks period. Any pupil falling below 75 per cent in any one subject must take all of the examinations. If the department is below 90 per cent, this also requires examination in all subjects. Each tardy mark raises the required average one per cent and five tardy marks causes one to take the examinations. The aim is to keep as many pupils as possible at their best all the time. No pupil should be given an exemption who is not able to pass all of the tests required.

"Parents will please carefully examine the reports, and if there is anything unsatisfactory or not fully explained, please make it known and attention to any request will be gladly given. If a pupil is not maintaining an average of 80 per cent or above, better work will be necessary to insure the necessary average of 75 per cent required for promotion. A little extra work at this time may be of great profit.

"The work of the first six weeks of school has shown an increase over former terms. Department has failed fewer than usual and there is a fine spirit of work everywhere. No one on the football team was removed on account of poor work. This is very commendable to the team."

AUTO'S MAD RACE WITH BALLOON

Dr. Frank Green in a Contest With the German Government Air Bag

TO ASCERTAIN ITS SPEED

Finds That Balloon Sails at the Rate of Thirty-five Miles an Hour

A race between an automobile and the German balloon which passed Rushville at 9 o'clock this morning, was the sight witnessed by farmers along the Connersville pike east of this city today.

The balloon was probably a mile east of here, when Dr. Frank Green, together with T. M. Green, leaped into his Stoddard-Dayton machine, and putting on the high gear ran like mad until he came directly under the balloon. The doctor has a speed gauge on his auto and he wished to ascertain how fast the balloon was traveling.

At no time did he run at a rate less than twenty-five miles an hour and on several stretches of straight pike he got up a speed of forty miles an hour. A few miles west of Glenwood the doctor overtook the balloon and he drove his car at a speed to keep under the air bag that he could know how fast they were sailing. As near as he could measure, the balloon was then going at a speed of thirty-five miles an hour.

Of course they cannot attain such a speed only when the current of the air is favorable.

CHAPTER II.

SHE awoke to the throb of the engines and, gazing cautiously through her stateroom window, saw a glassy, level sea, with the sun brightly aglow on it.

So this was Bering? She had clothed it always with the mystery of her school days, thinking of it as a weeping, fog bound stretch of gray waters. Instead she saw a flat, sunlit main, with occasional sea parrots flapping their fat bodies out of the ship's course. A glistening head popped up from the waters abreast, and she heard the cry of "Seal!"

Dressing, the girl noted minutely the personal articles scattered about the cabin, striving to derive therefrom some fresh hint of the characteristics of the owners. First, there was an elaborate copper backed toilet set, all richly ornamented and leather bound. The metal was magnificently hand marked and bore Glenister's initial. It spoke of elegant extravagance and seemed oddly out of place in an arctic miner's equipment, as did also a small set of De Maupassant.

Next she picked up Kipling's "Seven Seas," marked liberally, and felt that she had struck a scent. The roughness and brutality of the poems had always chilled her, though she had felt vaguely their splendid pulse and swing. This was the girl's first venture from a sheltered life. She had not rubbed elbows with the world enough to find that truth may be rough, unshaven and garbed in homespun. The book confirmed her analysis of the junior partner.

Pendent from a hook was a worn and blackened holster from which peeped the butt of a large Colt's revolver, showing evidence of many years' service. It spoke mutely of the white haired Dextery, who, before her inspection was over, knocked at the door, and, when she admitted him, addressed her cautiously:

"The boy's down forrad, teasin' grub out of a flunky. He'll be up in a minute. How'd ye sleep?"

"Very well, thank you," she lied, "but I've been thinking that I ought to explain myself to you."

"Now, see here," the old man interjected, "there ain't no explanations needed till you feel like givin' them up. You was in trouble—that's unfortunate. We help you—that's natural. No questions asked—that's Alaska."

"Yes, but I know you must think"—"What bothers me," the other continued irrelevantly, "is how in blazes we're goin' to keep you hid. The steward's got to make up this room, and somebody's bound to see us packin' grub in."

"I don't care who knows if they won't send me back. They wouldn't do that, would they?" She hung anxiously on his words.

"Send you back? Why, don't you savvy that this boat is bound for Nome? There ain't no turnin' back on gold stampedes, and this is the wildest rush the world ever saw. The captain wouldn't turn back. He couldn't. His cargo's too precious, and the company pays $5,000 a day for this ship. No, we ain't puttin' back to unload no stowaways at five thousand per. Besides, we passengers wouldn't let him—time's too precious." They were interrupted by the rattle of dishes outside, and Dextery was about to open the door when his hand wavered uncertainly above the knob, for he heard the hearty greeting of the ship's captain.

"Well, well, Glenister, where's all the breakfast going?"

"Oo," whispered the old man, "that's Cap' Stephens."

"Dextery isn't feeling quite up to form this morning," replied Glenister easily.

"Don't wonder! Why weren't you aboard sooner last night? I saw you. Most got left, eh? Served you right if you had." Then his voice dropped to the confidential: "I'd advise you to cut out those women. Don't misunderstand me, boy, but they're a bad lot on this boat. I saw you come aboard. Take my word for it, they're a bad lot. Cut 'em out. Guess I'll step inside and see what's up with Dextery."

The girl shrank into her corner, gazing apprehensively at the other listener.

"Well—er—he isn't up yet," they heard Glenister stammer. "Better come around later."

"Nonsense! It's time he was dressed." The master's voice was gruffly good natured. "Hello, Dextery! Hey! Open up for inspection." He rattled the door.

There was nothing to be done. The old miner darted an inquiring glance at his companion, then, at her nod, slipped the bolt, and the captain's blue bulk filled the room.

His grizzled close bearded face was genially wrinkled till he spied the erect gray figure in the corner, when his cap came off involuntarily. There his courtesy ended, however, and the smile died coldly from his face. His eyes narrowed, and the good fellowship fell away, leaving him the stiff and formal officer.

"Ah," he said, "not feeling well, eh? I thought I had met all of our lady passengers. Introduce me, Dextery."

Dextery squirmed under his cynicism. "Well—I—ah—didn't catch the name myself."

"What?"

"Oh, there ain't much to say. This is the lady we brought aboard last night—that's all."

"Who gave you permission?"

"Nobody. There wasn't time."

"There wasn't time, eh? Which one of you conceived the novel scheme of stowing away ladies in your cabin? Whose is she? Quick! Answer me."

Indignation was vibrant in his voice.

"Oh!" the girl cried, her eyes widening darkly. She stood slim and pale and slightly trembling.

His words had cut her bitterly, though through it all he had scrupulously avoided addressing her.

The captain turned to Glenister, who had entered and closed the door.

"Is this your work? Is she yours?"

"No," he answered quietly, while Dextery chimed in:

"Better hear details, captain, before you make breaks like that. We helped the lady side step some sailors last night, and we most got left doing it. It was up to her to make a quick getaway, so we helped her aboard."

"A poor story! What was she running away from?" He still addressed the men, ignoring her completely till, with hoarse voice, she broke in:

"You mustn't talk about me that way. I can answer your questions. It's true—I ran away. I had to. The sailors came after me and fought with these men. I had to get away quickly, and your friends helped me on here from gentlemanly kindness, because they saw me unprotected. They are still protecting me. I can't explain how important it is for me to reach Nome on the first boat, because it isn't my secret. It was important enough to make me leave my uncle at Seattle at an hour's notice when we found there was no one else who could go. That's all I can say. I took my maid with me, but the sailors caught her just as she was following me down the ship's ladder. She had my bag of clothes when they seized her. I cast off the rope and rowed ashore as fast as I could, but they lowered another boat and followed me."

The captain eyed her sharply, and his grim lines softened a bit, for she was clean cut and womanly and utterly out of place. He took her in shrewdly, detail by detail, then spoke directly to her:

"My dear young lady, the other ship will get there just as quickly as ours maybe more quickly. Tomorrow we strike the ice pack, and then, as is a matter of luck."

"Yes, but the ship I left won't get there."

At this the commander started and, darting a great, thick fingered hand at her, spoke savagely:

"What's that? What ship? Which one did you come from? Answer me."

"The Ohio," she replied, with the effect of a hand grenade. The master glared at her.

"The Ohio! Good God! You dare to stand there and tell me that?" He turned and poured his rage upon the others.

"She says the Ohio, d'ye hear? You've ruined me! I'll put you in irons—all of you. The Ohio!"

"What d'ye mean? What's up?"

"What's up! There's smallpox aboard the Ohio! Th' girl has broken quarantine. The health inspectors bottled

"I'll put you in irons—all of you" up the boat at 6 o'clock last night. That's why I pulled out of Unalaska ahead of time, to avoid any possible delay. Now we'll all be held up when we get to Nome. Great Heavens! Do you realize what this means—bringing this hussy aboard?"

His eyes burned, and his voice shook, while the two partners stared at each other in dismay. Too well they knew the result of a smallpox panic aboard this crowded troop ship. Not only was every available cabin bulging with passengers, but the lower decks were jammed with both humanity and live stock all in the most unsanitary conditions. The craft, built for 300 passengers, was carrying triple her capacity. Men and women were stowed away like cattle. Order and a half tolerable condition were maintained only by the efforts of the passengers themselves, who held to the thought that imprisonment and inconvenience would last but a few days longer. They had been aboard three weeks, and every heart was aflame with the desire to reach Nome—to reach it ahead of the pressing horde behind.

What would be the temper of this gold frenzied army if thrown into quarantine within sight of their goal? The impatient hundreds would have to lie packed in their floating prison, submitting to the foul disease. Long they must lie thus, till a month should have passed after the disappearance of the last symptom. If the disease recurred sporadically, that might mean endless weeks of maddening idleness. It might even be impossible to impose the necessary restraint. There would be violence, perhaps mutiny.

The fear of the sickness was nothing to Dextery and Glenister, but of their mine they thought with terror. What would happen in their absence, where conditions were as unsettled as in this new land, where titles were held only by physical possession of the premises? During the long winter of their absence ice had held their treasure inviolate, but with the warming summer the jewel they had fought for so wearily would lie naked and exposed to the first comer. The Midas lay in the valley of the richest creek, where men had schemed and fought and slain for the right to inches. It was the fruit of cheerless, barren years of toil, and if they could not guard it they knew the result.

The girl interrupted their distressing reflections.

"Don't blame these men, sir," she begged the captain. "I am the only one at fault. Oh, I had to get away! I have papers here that must be delivered quickly." She laid a hand upon her bosom. "They couldn't be trusted to the unsettled mail service. It's almost life and death. And I assure you there is no need of putting me in quarantine. I haven't the smallpox. I wasn't even exposed to it."

"There's nothing else to do," said Stephens. "I'll isolate you in the deck smoking cabin. God knows what these madmen on board will do when they hear about it, though. They're apt to tear you to shreds. They're crazy."

Glenister had been thinking rapidly. "If you do that, you'll have mutiny in an hour. This isn't the crowd to stand that sort of thing."

"Bah! Let 'em try it. I'll put 'em down." The officer's square jaws clicked.

"Maybe so; but what then? We reach Nome and the health inspector hears of smallpox suspects, then we're all quarantined for thirty days; 800 of us. We'll lie at Egg Island all summer while your company pays five thousand a day for this ship. That's not all. The firm is liable in damages for your carelessness in letting disease aboard."

"My carelessness!" The old man ground his teeth.

"Yes; that's what it amounts to. You'll ruin your owners, all right. You'll tie up your ship and lose your job, that's a cinch!"

Captain Stephens wiped the moisture from his brow angrily.

"My carelessness! Curse you—you say it well! Don't you realize that I am criminally liable if I don't take every precaution?" He paused for a moment, considering. "I'll hand her over to the ship's doctor."

"See here, now," Glenister urged.

"We'll be in Nome in a week—before the young lady would have time to show symptoms of the disease, even if she were going to have it—and a thousand to one she hasn't been exposed and will never show a trace of it. Nobody knows she's aboard but we three. Nobody will see her get off. She'll stay in this cabin, which will be just as effectual as though you isolated her in any other part of the boat. It will avoid a panic—you'll save your ship and your company—nobody will be the wiser—then if the girl comes down with smallpox after she gets ashore she can go to the pesthouse and not jeopardize the health of all the people aboard this ship. You go up forrad to your bridge, sir, and forget that you stepped in to see old Bill Dextery this morning. We'll take care of this matter all right. It means as much to us as it does to you. We've got to be on Anvil creek before the ground thaws or we'll lose the Midas. If you make a fuss you'll ruin us all."

For some moments they watched him breathlessly as he frowned in indecision, then:

"You'll have to look out for the steward," he said, and the girl sank to a stool while two great tears rolled down her cheeks. The captain's eyes softened, and his voice was gentle as he laid his hand on her head.

"Don't feel hurt over what I said, miss. You see, appearances don't tell much hereabouts—most of the pretty ones are no good. They've fooled me many a time, and I made a mistake. These men will help you through. I can't. Then when you get to Nome, make your sweetheart marry you the day you land. You are two far north to be alone."

He stepped out into the passage and closed the door carefully.

NEW FIELDS PLAY.

"The Girl Behind the Counter," by Edgar Smith.

CONNIE EDISS, LOTTA FAUST.

Fields Seen In Role of Henry Schniff, Who Marries His Landlady to Wipe Out a Four Years' Debt, Then Inherits a Fortune.

[From Our New York Dramatic Correspondent.]

Lew Fields opened his New York season with his new musical comedy, "The Girl Behind the Counter," at the Herald Square theater.

In his support are Miss Connie Ediss, for many years leading woman in George Edwardes' productions in London; Miss Louise Dresser, Miss Lotta Faust, Miss May Naudain, the original English pony ballet with new dances, George Beban, Ignacio Martinetti, Denman Maley, Joseph Ratliff, Vernon Castle and others to the number of a hundred. There is something more of a plot to "The Girl Behind the Counter" than has been lately usual in musical comedies, and, without loss of the real theme, the story has been written about the eighteen musical numbers of the piece.

Fields as Henry Schniff has been the victim of misfortune all his life, has never known what it was to have a shilling to spare and grasped the opportunity of marrying his landlady, to whom he owed over four years' lodging. While on their honeymoon Schniff learns that he has been left £1,000,000, and the sudden transition from poverty to wealth becomes a burden through the medium of his wife, the former Mrs. Willoughby (Connie Ediss), who becomes insanely desirous of "mixing up" in real society. The action is laid in a London "American" department store, where American methods of handling everything, from baby carriages to coffins, is satirized.

The piece was adapted for Mr. Fields by Edgar Smith, whose long familiarity with the comedy and work of both LOTTA FAUST.

Mr. Fields and Miss Ediss made it possible to fit the book perfectly to both. Julian Mitchell and J. C. Huffman staged the production.

FISH VS. MOSQUITO.

Minnows Now to Be Used in War Against the Insect.

NEW JERSEY TRYING PLAN.

Dr. John B. Smith, State Entomologist, Aims to Kill Off the Germ Carriers by Placing Finny Auxiliaries in Brackish Waters.

They fish which grow no larger than the length of your thumb have been enlisted in the war against the Jersey mosquito. With the help of an army of these finny auxiliaries once they can be acclimated to the waters of the state, Jersey's chief entomologist, Dr. John B. Smith, hopes to banish the "skeeters," especially the kind that carry the germs of malaria, says the Philadelphia Press.

The fish to be used are members of a family called the atherinidae, of which there are fourteen principal varieties and sixty-five subvarieties in different parts of the world, and those which are to be set upon the trail of the Jersey mosquitoes are called Gambusia affinis and Heterandria formosa, which are to be found in the waters of North Carolina and adjacent states.

These fish are commonly called "top minnows" because they come to the surface to feed, and it is known that they esteem as a special delicacy the eggs of the "skeeter." Now, it has been the chief problem of the Jersey mosquito fighters to find a way to kill the eggs before they are hatched in the various marshes or placid pools. So it is argued that if the water bodies in which the "skeeters" breed can be stocked with these fish the "top minnows" once they become used to the temperature and surroundings of their home will soon make short work of the mosquito larvae.

While Jersey's mosquito has earned a hard name for the state, the commonwealth is by no means the greatest haven of the insect. In fact, the mosquito is known as the greatest ravager of mankind. India, for instance, loses about 2,000,000 of its people annually through diseases carried by the deadliest type. Italy also is a great sufferer. About 2,000,000 of its inhabitants contract malaria each year with the assistance of the "skeeter," and some 15,000 die.

Out in the Philippines the greatest enemy of the American soldiers is this same insect, and to protect themselves they have to use screens which are almost gauzy in their fineness, and even these frequently are pierced by the mosquitoes.

Italy just now is trying to introduce into its water fish called Pseudomugil signifer, which are of the same family as those used in New Jersey, but which were taken there from Australia. Some thousands were recently introduced, but sufficient time has not elapsed to determine the results.

Over in Hawaii, too, Gambusia from the coastal waters of Texas have been placed in canals and irrigation ditches to exterminate the "skeeters" which breed there.

The common Jersey mosquito—the Culex—is not the worst of his kind. In fact, though his buzz is louder than the deadliest kinds, it may be said that his "bark" is worse than his bite. The two worst species are the Anopheles, which carries the malarial germ, and the Stegomyia, which was found in Cuba to carry the yellow fever parasite. Though Anopheles do breed in Jersey, they are not anywhere as numerous as the Culex, which is not known to be a transmitter of disease.

Repeated Paul Revere Ride.

One of the queerest bits of hazing at the Missouri university was the representation of Paul Revere, famed in history, says a Columbia, Mo., dispatch to the New York Herald. The victim was persuaded to mount a white mule at midnight, and attired in a Continental uniform he dug a pair of huge Spanish spurs into the flanks of his steed, which dashed away over the country road. At each village, hamlet and square the student shouted at the top of his voice:

"The British are coming! The British are coming! To arms!"

Persons awakened from their sleep gazed out of their windows in surprise as the phantom steed and rider faded into the night. Many thought a madman was loose and notified the police. At several houses the modern Revere hammered on the doors until the owners appeared, and to each he imparted the startling information that the redcoats were invading the colony. The famous ride ended when a constable caught up with the mule and arrested the whole outfit for disturbing the peace.

To Conquer Tuberculosis.

Dr. Lawrence F. Flick, director of the Phipps Institute, Philadelphia, is home from Europe, where he attended two congresses on tuberculosis. Basing his assertion upon reports from every civilized country, he declares that the "white plague" within a short time will disappear from among the scourges of humanity. "It is as clear as daylight," Dr. Flick said, "that science can stamp out tuberculosis. Much can be achieved in the cure of the disease itself, but the most hopeful work has been done in the direction of prevention. From every country in the world I have heard scientists tell of the good already accomplished. In two huge assemblies not a single pessimistic note was struck."

INQUIRE WITHIN.

Chicago Widower's Unique Way of Securing a Wife.

N. H. Matthews of Chicago, a widower fifty years old, has invented a unique way to get a wife, says the Chicago American. Discarding all the time worn methods, he has placed in the window of his home, 1305 North Halsted street, a placard with the following inscription:

A widower living within WANTS A WIFE.
Ladies, if you want a husband
Inquire within at once.
N. H. MATTHEWS.

The appearance of the card created something of a sensation along the street, especially among the women of marriageable age. Before long Mr. Matthews learned that it pays to advertise. A neatly attired woman glanced at the sign, hesitated, started back, hesitated again and at last ventured up and rang the doorbell.

"I beg pardon, but I noticed your advertisement," began the applicant by way of introduction.

"Oh, yes," answered Matthews. "Just step into the parlor."

"Will you please tell me something about the place—that is—er—I mean you?"

"Why, yes," replied Matthews. "My wife died six months ago, and I find that the housekeepers you get care nothing about a man's children. I must have somebody who will be a mother to my children, and I believe that the way to get that person is to marry her. I want a good, motherly woman about thirty-five years old."

"They certainly are sweet little things," said the woman after seeing the children. "But I don't know. I'll tell you—I'll write if I think better of the matter. Goodby."

There were two other applicants during the day, both of whom seemed to favor Matthews alone, but balked at the children.

CAPTAIN CHANCE'S WORK.

Manager of Chicago Baseball Club a Natural Born Leader.

Writing of the splendid work during the past season of Captain Chance of the Chicago baseball club, Langdon W. Smith says in the New York American:

"Calm and dignified, playing with his head as with his heart and holding his men in hand as a four-in-hand driver holds his horses, Chance has won out in one of the most strenuous seasons the history of baseball has ever known. 'There is not a player on the Chicago team who would not go to the limit for him. They realize that he is a player as well as a manager. He will not ask a man to do a thing he would not do himself. He takes pot luck with his men. Their joys and sorrows have been his. Their triumphs have been his chief aim. One had only to look at the Cubs in this world's series to see how thoroughly and harmoniously they work together."

"Coming in from the field at the end of an inning, you could see every man of them smack his hands together and savagely cry: 'Get at them! No matter about that error; we've got them skinned a mile!'"

"Ungrammatical perhaps, but showing the wireless bond of faith and fellowship that gripped them. All this has been due to the work of the captain and player, Frank Chance."

"He is a natural born baseball leader. He showed his grit in one game when a shoot from 'Wild Bill' Donovan broke the middle finger of his right hand. He went back to the players' bench, had it bound up and resumed his position at first base as though a broken finger were of no consequence."

Pensions Now, Not Turkeys.

With each recurrent Thanksgiving day it has been the custom of the Westinghouse Air Brake company to give each of its 3,500 employees at Wilmerding, Pa., a fine fat turkey. At a recent meeting of the Air Brake company directors the proposition of establishing a pension fund was taken up. The directors named a committee to formulate a plan. Following the meeting, it was suggested that instead of giving turkeys the money be turned into the pension fund. The money that was expended for turkeys will not be made the nucleus of the fund, but it will be a nest egg that will help considerably in swelling the total that will be used as the base of the fund.

To Relieve the Dogs.

The medical department of Cornell university, which is located in New York city in a handsome building erected by the generosity of Colonel Oliver H. Payne, has decided to turn its attention to the cure of distemper in dogs, a disease which the college authorities declare has been too long overlooked in the scientific pursuit of other matters. An expert is to be engaged under the direction of three eminent medical men, and he will begin a thorough pursuit of the causes of the disease and the discovery of a remedy.

Cutting Steel by Oxygen Gas.

A new method of cutting steel is said to have been patented by a Belgian engineer. The process consists in first heating the metal by means of an oxyhydrogen flame and then cutting it by a small stream of oxygen gas, which unites with the steel and forms a fusible oxide, which flows freely from the cut. It is said that the cut is fully as smooth as that made by the saw and is only one one-thousandth of an inch wide.

BUNGALOW FOR BOYS.

Six Brothers, Aged Six to Fifteen, Are to Live by Themselves.

William Jeffery, a real estate man of Berkeley Heights, N. J., who is the father of six sons ranging in age from six to fifteen years, is building a one story bungalow in the rear of his own home for the exclusive use of his boys and given over entirely to their care. There the boys are to live, study and play, and there they can "rough house" to whatever extent they please, says their father, but they are only to enter their parents' house on invitation, and their parents in return will call on them.

The bungalow is to be equipped with movable bunks and with lockers, where the boys will keep their guns, baseball bats, tennis rackets and other things which they formerly left about the house, says the New York Times. There is only one room, but that is to be divided into a number of smaller ones by sliding screens. In winter they will get their heat from a big stove, which they must look after themselves.

In fact, they are to do all the housework. They are to make their own beds, sweep the floor and put away their own things. Mr. Jeffery says that in this way he believes they will acquire a sense of responsibility and a spirit of self reliance such as no other training, not even boarding school, will give them.

The six boys are watching the progress of the building with the anticipation of much pleasure.

"Of course," said Mr. Jeffery, "in order to have the bungalow kept neat and clean there must be some supervision. I shall inspect their quarters every day myself, and any neglect will be visited with fitting discipline. This idea so much lessens the worries and cares of a mother that it ought to be taken up by other persons who have large families."

SURGERY FOR INSANITY.

British Alienist Reports Cures in Early Stages by Brain Operations.

The question of curing insanity by surgical operation was dealt with recently by Dr. Bernard Hollander, the well known alienist, in a lecture before the British Phrenological society, says a cable to the New York Sun.

Some time ago Dr. Hollander published in medical journals his details of a case of mental derangement which he had cured by trephining. Since then he had continued his investigations in that direction.

He related the case of a boy of sixteen whose overpowering wickedness was removed along with a strip of bone from his skull. He was a liar, a thief, a bully and a mischievous destroyer of property and was without a sense of decency. He grew continuously more dangerous until he was arraigned in court for misdemeanor. At Dr. Hollander's suggestion his head was operated upon.

An incision was made on top and carried vertically downward to each ear. When the tissues above the right ear were revealed signs of an old injury were found. Several trephinations were made and the bone cut away. The membranes of the brain showed traces of an old hemorrhage. The region was treated antiseptically and the wound was closed. It healed, and the patient became a reformed character. He not only lost his immoral and indecent propensities, but showed a desire to please and help others and was generally moral.

Lays Baldness to Prunes.

Professor Trouessart of the Museum of Natural History declared before the Academy of Science that there was a well defined connection between prunes and baldness. The professor said he had discovered a new kind of microbe which flourishes alike in prunes and figs and other dried fruits and in the human hair and the feathers of certain birds, notably parrots. "I do not affirm," said the professor, "that these microbes cause hair to fall, but they certainly give rise to a condition predisposing to baldness."

Apple Tree Blooms in Fall.

At the residence of E. N. Skinner, proprietor of the Plaza hotel, Wichita, Kan., may be seen an apple tree in full bloom. In speaking of the curiosity Mr. Skinner said: "We have lived at the same place for a number of years, and the tree had never bloomed before except in the spring. But for the last ten days blossoms have been noticed on that particular tree, and closer inspection revealed that small apples were forming."

A Hint to Mr. Wu.

They say you'll soon be with us, with new question marks unspent. Oh, Wu, with almond optics, from the far-off orient! No doubt you'll want to ask us all the ifs and ands and whys. But please be easy with us—do not try to get too wise.

Don't ask us why the home team didn't win the baseball flag. It pains us even thinking of that much desired rag. Don't ask us why the grafters, who have made the righteous rail, are on the streets in freedom, 'stead of doing time in jail.

Don't ask why John D.'s golf game has grown just a trifle off. Nor why muck raking writers fill the land with gibe and scoff. Don't ask us why the hospitals are filled with athletes pined.

When the noble game of football has been "debrutalized." Don't ask such awkward questions that we're tempted to evade—We like to throw our chests out when you put us on parade. So be easy on us fellows, and we'll tell the truth to you. If you'll stick to pleasant queries, oh, persistent Mr. Wu!

Women Who Do

A Helpful Country Club—A New Way to Get a Comfortable Home—The Descending Scale in Salaries. :: :: ::

An interesting philanthropy has been undertaken by Miss Woodhull of Norton Park, Bredon's Norton, England. It is the establishment at that place of what she calls the International Agricultural club under the direction of Miss May Crooke, late subwarden of Lady Warwick's famous hostel. Miss Woodhull has been impressed by the pathetic fate of women of family and fortune unexpectedly left penniless or with only a small income. It is her object to provide such with a beautiful and refined home and show them the way to make use of such talents as they have in augmenting their incomes. At the manor house in which the club is installed—a beautiful fifteenth century mansion fitted up to meet modern conditions—there are rooms for various forms of artistic work, and the dairy, poultry houses and gardens are all laid out in such a way as to make practical teaching possible.

She Built Her Home.

Here's an energetic woman, and she acknowledges to being five years beyond the limit set by Dr. Osler for chloroforming all human beings as useless. She is Mrs. Laura E. Cook of Elmdale, Cal., who built herself a house which is so attractive and convenient that she has refused offers of $5,000 for it because she wants to live in it herself.

Mrs. Cook planned the house. She laid the foundation. It's a good, strong one of stone and concrete too. She built the walls and put on the lumber.

She built a chimney that doesn't smoke. Last, but not least, she got up on the roof and shingled the house.

Mrs. Cook is not only a capable house builder, but she is a first class landscape gardener. The lot which she bought on a bleak hillside she has terraced and laid out in charming patches of shrubbery and enchanting flower plots. One thousand dollars, the price of the lot, and what she paid for lumber, paint, etc., are all that her lovely home cost her.

Small Salaries, Small Thrift.

Women humbly placed in the business or professional world spend their money less with an eye to the main chance, but, if anything, more thriftlessly than do those who earn generous salaries. A good deal of cash goes for clothes, pleasure excursions, tickets for entertainments, etc. Not one of these young women looks forward to the time when she may be ill or unable to work longer. Most of them expect to marry.

In some cities there is a system of insurance that protects schoolteachers in old age. For the mass of women who do not marry and who have nothing to fall back upon the outlook is gloomy indeed.

Honors For Women Doctors.

In two states women hold official positions in the state medical associations. Dr. Inez C. Philbrick of Lincoln is second vice president of the Nebraska State Medical association, and Dr. Maria B. Averill of San Diego has been elected to the same office in the California State Homeopathic Medical society. It is gratifying that their fellow practitioners should recognize the value of women in the medical profession and the worth of these particular ladies by electing them to these honorable offices.

A Great French Novelist.

Professor Page of Columbia university declares that Marcelle Tinayre is one of the most talented of French novelists. Her last novel, which is regarded as a masterpiece by her admirers, is entitled "La Maison de Peche." The emancipated, self supporting woman is her ideal heroine. She is openly critical of many of society's most cherished conventions.

A Georgia Wit.

Miss Edna V. Cain, the clever young woman who owns and edits the Free Press of Quitman, Ga., has recently been paying a visit to New York and writing up her impressions of the town for the Evening World with a wit and originality that have charmed the jaded taste of the metropolitan public.

Something Should be Done

What is Causing the Increase of Catarrh in Rushville?

In spite of the best efforts of medical men, catarrhal troubles are increasing not only in Rushville, but all over the country.

Catarrh is a germ disease, and to cure it germ life in the breathing organs should be destroyed, and to do this no other treatment has such positive and beneficial action as Hyomei.

When the mucous membrane is irritated and raw and the tissues weakened there is an ideal lodging place for catarrhal germs. Breathe Hyomei and see how quickly it soothes the membranes, vitalizes the tissues and destroys all the disease germs, rendering catarrh no longer possible.

There is no dangerous stomach drugging when Hyomei is used; no tablets or liquid mixtures destroying indigestion.

Breathed through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every Hyomei outfit, the healing balsams penetrate to the most remote air cells of the throat, nose and lungs, destroying the catarrhal germs so that quick recovery follows.

Johnson's drug store agrees to refund the money to any purchaser of Hyomei who does not find that it does all that is claimed for it. The complete outfit costs but $1.00.

Phil Allen has accepted a position in the press rooms of the Republican company.

For the Shampoo.---When the hair is coarse and dry it means that the scalp is in an unhealthy condition---that the natural oils, which give it life and feed the hair, are not flowing freely. The scalp must be given good care for its own sake if nothing else. Cut about one-sixth of a cake of Cacti Soap into fine shavings; pour over them about a pint of warm water and stir until dissolved; wet the hair and scalp well with this and rub thoroughly with the flat hand or fingers---never scratch, it causes dandruff. Rub for ten minutes then rinse carefully in clear water.

A Cacti Soap Shampoo once a week will remove dandruff and surely stop falling hair. Ten cents a cake of all good dealers.

SCREECH OWL GRABS WOMAN

After the Family Was on the Verge of Nervous Prostration From Fright

BIRD WAS A BURGLAR

And Came Into the Home Via the Chimney and Stove Pipe

A battle with a screech owl, under peculiar circumstances, was the unique experience of Mrs. R. E. Wilson, of 927 North Morgan street, Sunday evening.

For some time the family heard a most distressing cry and after repeatedly searching the premises were unable to locate from what source it came. At times it would sound like a baby and again they were of the opinion that it was either a dog or cat under the house.

After making what they decided to be a final search, they heard a shuffling noise in the stove pipe which connected with a radiator, and soon a shrill, piercing and ungodly sound came from the stove pipe. A hasty investigation and unjointing of the pipe revealed a full grown screech owl snugly hidden in the pipe. Mrs. Wilson reached in to remove the feathered screecher, when the owl grabbed her by the hand, and she suffered a painful wound. Frank Mock, who was at the Wilson home at the time, removed the owl from its "modern flat with a hot air plant." That the bird could pass down the chimney, and through ten feet of a small stove pipe, past a dampner, is a mystery to the Wilsons.
